MONTREAL HOSTS CFUW AT ITS AGM and CONFERENCE

With 88 clubs across Canada and more than 6,700 members, CFUW continues to work to support education for — and empowerment of — women and girls near and far. Every year, CFUW raises over $1-million in scholarships for post-secondary education and other local causes. (Source: CFUW website)

Approximately 175 participants of this weeklong July event were entertained by the Lakeshore Community Choir. Pictured here, from left, pianist Gaétan Daigneault, singers Julie Leblanc and Kerry-Anne Kutz.

President's Message

Dear Members,

Summer Reflections and Looking Ahead

As Montreal settles into another hot summer, here are some things to think about as you sip a cool drink.

At our June 17 dinner at Geso, the Board invited members to participate in a simple exercise to help inform our strategic planning discussions and preparations for UWCM's 2027 centenary. Members wrote down up to three words describing the Club today or looking forward. Together, members contributed 76 responses.

The results were reassuring and thought-provoking. Above all, UWCM was described as a place of connection and community. This was followed by contributing to women and society, learning and intellectual engagement. Friendship was mentioned most frequently. Taken together, the responses suggest that members experience UWCM as a place to connect, learn, and contribute.

The evening offered an additional perspective. Elise Monaghan Joubert spoke about the work of Chez Doris, which supports vulnerable women in Montreal through housing and related services. Members asked thoughtful questions and showed strong interest in the organization and its impact.

The combination of the three-word exercise and the Chez Doris discussion highlighted something important. Members clearly value contributing to the lives of women and girls. More broadly, I have noticed that when UWCM members encounter a clearly defined need or a tangible opportunity to help, you/we respond with enthusiasm and generosity.

This seems to be in contrast with a difficulty the Board experienced last year. We created a new advocacy committee but failed to recruit and sustain membership for it. Now I wonder: was the challenge due less to members' interest in current issues, and more to how we structured the opportunity for engagement? Does the notion of an "advocacy committee" seem too abstract or heavy? How can the Board encourage social action that aligns more with ways you/we want to engage?

As the Club begins its strategic planning process under the leadership of UWCM member and Past President Maya Bergeron-Métivier, these are among the questions we will explore.

This is an exciting moment for our Club. Few organizations can reflect on a century of history while imagining the next one. The thoughtful responses from members suggest that UWCM is well positioned to continue evolving while remaining true to its core values.

I wish everyone a wonderful August, and I look forward to continuing the conversation in September.

Warm regards,

Lorraine O'Donnell

President

CLARIFICATION: There is an incorrect sentence on financial statements in the AGM article I wrote last month (page 1, July 2026). It should have read "Outgoing Treasurer Adèle Hébert read the financial statements that had been compiled by public accountant Lynn De Grace." My apologies go to Lynn and my thanks go to Club member Rhonda Schanfield for alerting me to this.

HISTORICAL RECOGNITION

July 11th marked the beginning of the Kanesatake Resistance, also known as the Oka Crisis, a 78-day standoff (July 11 to September 26, 1990) between Kanyen'kehà:ka protesters, Quebec police, the RCMP, and the Canadian Army.

A two-hour National Film Board documentary entitled Kanehsatake: 270 Years of Resistance, directed by Alanis Obomsawin, highlights the events of the 1990 Oka Crisis through the Indigenous perspective, giving agency to a group that was often misrepresented in mass media.

GWl News

By Lynn Travers, M.A.L. and GWl Liaison

The following provides a brief summary of GWl's strategic plans, advocacy efforts, UN engagements, and support programs for women and girls, all of which reflect its broader mission.

The GWl Board adopted a strategic plan with six goals focused on education, leadership, credibility, member engagement, collaboration, and financial sustainability. The plan emphasizes digital education, AI ethics, and impact measurement.

Support for Displaced Women Graduates

Highlighting barriers (like interrupted education and credential loss) faced by refugee women, the GWl Hegg-Hoffet Fund offers short-term financial aid to help displaced women rebuild careers.

GWl's Advocacy on Child Labour and Education

GWl marked World Day Against Child Labour, emphasizing policies to end child exploitation and promote inclusive education. Its programs help keep children in school and prevent child labour.

U.N. Engagement and Global Initiatives

- The UN80 Initiative aims to reform the UN to achieve greater impact through structural changes and new mandates.
- GWl participated in the Alliance of NGOs General Assembly, strengthening civil society's role in crime prevention.
- The GWl UN representatives reported on UNICEF's efforts to expand education and address global challenges such as AI and debt.

Support Programs for Girls' Education

Funds from the GWl "Girls Education for Brighter Futures" projects improve health, income, and school retention for girls.
